

FRUIT

Longan

The “dragon’s eye”: a small, translucent, sweet and musky bead, bite-sized.

The longan is a small round fruit with thin light brown skin, which hides translucent, juicy, firm flesh around a shiny stone. Its taste, sweet with a musky note, recalls lychee but more subtly. It is eaten by squeezing it to push the flesh out. It is offered in punnets, practical for presentation.

FLAVOUR

Sweet, musky, close to lychee
